The Benefits of This Sale Are Mutual.

It isn't philanthrophy that causes us to sacrifice stock in order to save it from dust and dirt. It's good business policy-a policy that leads us to give you the goods now while they're fresh as low as we'd have to give them to you later if the dust and dirt got to them. And it is mutually beneficial.

We haven't told you all that has been planned in the way of rebuilding and alteration. The addition of the United States Express Building is only a part of our plan. Our present stores, too, will be affected by the changes we intend to make. For instance, the Avenue window front comes out. It's a good-appearing front as it is, but we know how to improve it. It isn't a question of profit with us to make such a change-but in our scheme of constantly bettering the store, the bettering of appearance must be considered too.
